COOKING EXPERIENCE

Today, we engaged the children in an inquiry-based cooking experience. The children get to explore and investigate while mixing ingredients and using various tools, manipulating their curiosity throughout the process.

Alden: as soon as he saw the eggshell that was given to him on the table, he used the shell to scoop the flour out of his bowl, and as he saw other children smashing the shell, Alden tried to copy and started to use his index finger poking the shell and eventually realised that using his palm and fist works better in smashing the shell.

Fern: was a little bit hesitant from start and was just observing her peers. Eventually, she took the measuring spoon and started scooping water out of the container into her bowl and did the same with the floor and grated apples.

Fred, Zayden, Anita and Chloe: showed a lot of confidence into exploring all the ingredients that was on the table as well as using the tools that was needed to enjoy their work.

Indigo, Adrian and Ralf: enjoyed the sensory experience of tasting and patting the grated apple and flour.
